“The CBC is the most constructive and effective organization in the arena of bioethics. Support of their work is a contribution to the future of our civilization.”

—William Hurlbut, M.D.

Neuroscience Institute, Stanford University
Former Member, President’s Council on Bioethics

“Without acrimony, but clearly and forcefully, Jennifer Lahl helps us find our way through the thickets of emotion and heated opinion to discover what is the case and what should be done. She is a valuable citizen of the intellectual community.”

PROFILE

Jennifer is an international speaker, writer and filmmaker combining 25 years of pediatric critical care nursing, senior level nursing management and graduate training in bioethics to promote a life-affirming conscience in science, medicine, technology and public policy. Jennifer works with key-influencers and decision makers to challenge biotechnologies which might undermine human dignity or expose the vulnerable to abuse. She has addressed members of the U.S. Congress on harmful reproductive technologies, spoken to the members of the European Parliament in Brussels to address human egg-trafficking, written in popular press and peer-reviewed journals, spoken at conferences all over the world and produced three documentary films addressing what is at stake for human dignity in bioethics.
